

MARK BORAX

INTRODUCTION

MARK BORAX IS AN AUTHOR, POET, AND ASTROLOGER.

In the late seventies, he traveled the U.S. and Canada performing and selling his poetry. In the mid-eighties, Mark was befriended by his adolescent idol, Ray Bradbury, who became his literary godfather, believing in Mark's writing even though it was taking forever.

In 1984 he became a comic book writer and the managing editor of Comics Interview magazine. In 1998 Mark rode his Harley Davidson through the U.S. and Europe, stopping for a year in the Tuscan countryside of Northern Italy. Mark's first book, 2012: Crossing the Bridge to the Future, is a worldwide bestseller that describes the author's seven-year apprenticeship to visionary astrologer Ellias Lonsdale. Under the redwoods of northern California, they created a mystery school that birthed a new form of astrology called Star Genesis, which helps people contact their core nature and life purpose.

Mark's second book (co-authored with Lonsdale) is a Cosmic Weather Report that inspires readers to rethink the whole purpose of humankind and bring on a new future. His third book, The Ruby Heart of the Dragon, is a radical revision of the twelve Sun Signs, due out in May 2023.
